Dear Charles:

I know you will be interested to learn that I have resigned as President of Battelle Institute. I have made this move to enable me to engage more actively in private business. However, I shall continue to serve Battelle as a member of the Board of Directors and in a consulting and advisory capacity.

To meet some of the growing needs in industry, I have formed a new company to assist Boards of Directors and top management of industries with broad technical and business problems. The new firm will provide services in research programing and administration, in the application of science and technology to industry, and in problems of business organization and operation.

We expect to direct a great deal of effort to the growth and expansion of existing companies by helping them to broaden their interests and to expand their fields of activity. Another important phase of our work will be concerned with the formation of wholly new companies. These activities will include the finding of new products to develop, company acquisitions and mergers, and the utilization of new technologies.

I am pleased with the reception industry is giving our services and I look forward to a challenging period ahead. As you will note from the letterhead our central operations will be in Columbus.

With best wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,

Clyde Williams
President
